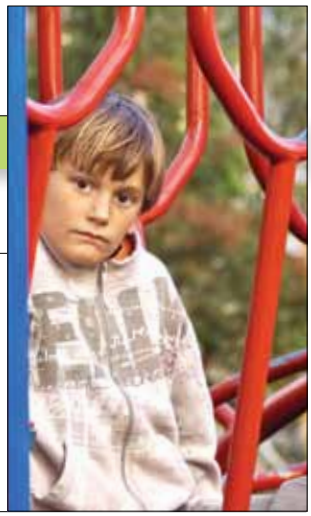
INFORMATION AND SUPPORT FOR PEOPLE AFFECTED BY ADHD



13 Is Recess a Luxury?

Many schools have replaced recess with increased academic learning. At schools that have kept it, children can lose recess as a consequence for behavioral issues. Are our children paying a price we've only just begun to understand?

by Barbara Hawkins

16 Tip Sheets from the Northern Virginia ADHD Partnership

A program that pioneered the training of school staff and parents to meet the academic and emotional needs of students with ADHD shares some of its accumulated strategies and wisdom.

by the Northern Virginia ADHD Partnership

20 Brilliant Minds with Learning Differences

While we've come so far in training educators to teach all kinds of minds, awareness and acceptance of ADHD and learning differences seem to stop at the doors of graduate and professional schools.

by Kathleen Nadeau, PhD

24 Going It Alone Wasn't Getting Her There

A second-year medical student works with an ADHD coach to identify how her symptoms impeded her studies and develop strategies to address them.

by Katherine McGavern

28 A Student's Journey with ADHD

Although she struggled in school from an early age, by the time she entered high school Morgan Plowman had become a confident and motivated student. How did she do it?

by Keath Low, MA
